

Virginia Car Accidents

Being involved in a car accident can change your life in an instant, especially if you have suffered serious injuries or lost a family member as a result of someone else's negligence. You may find yourself frustrated or struggling to cope with what has happened to you, and it's often difficult to figure out what to do next or where to even start.

Not only are you dealing with the pain of your injuries or your loss, but you will find that the insurance companies are not going to cut you any slack. Unfortunately, the goal of insurance companies is to make higher profits by limiting the amount of money they have to pay on any given claim, which means you may find yourself being pressured by an insurance adjuster to accept a low or inadequate settlement.

Worse yet, you may be worried if you will be able to provide for your family or even get treatment for your injuries, and you probably also have many questions, such as:

- Should I talk to the other driver's insurance company or sign any paperwork?
- How can I afford to pay my medical bills?
- Since the accident wasn't my fault, do I have a potential case?
- Do I need a lawyer if I've had a car accident in Virginia?
- If I do decide to hire a lawyer, how do I find the best Virginia car-accident lawyer for my particular case?
- If I'm offered a settlement by the insurance company, should I accept it?

The unfortunate reality is that serious car accidents happen far too often in Southwest Virginia, especially on roads such as I-81, I-77, I-64, Route 220, Route 221 and Route 11. According to the Virginia Department of Motor Vehicles, there were 756 motorists killed as a result of traffic accidents in 2009 in Virginia, and nearly 63,000 people suffered serious and often debilitating injuries. There were over 116,000 traffic crashes reported in Virginia in 2009.

What is especially troubling is that most accident victims are not aware of their rights, and they often find themselves being taken advantage of by unscrupulous and powerful insurance companies like AIG, State Farm, Allstate, Farmer's and others. These companies routinely engage in bad faith efforts to make low-ball settlement offers, delay claims (or deny claims altogether) and create confusion, all in an effort to pay as little money out as possible and maximize their profits.

Dealing with the aftermath of a serious car accident is bad enough. Don't make things worse by trying to take on the insurance companies on your own. If you or a family member has had a serious car accident in Southwest Virginia, it is important to speak to an experienced car accident attorney who understands the complexities of Virginia law and who can help guide you through this difficult time.

At Davis, Davis, Davis & Davis, P.C., our attorneys take pride in representing injury victims against the insurance companies. And while past results do not guarantee future results, we've successfully handled hundreds of Virginia car accident cases over the years and helped our clients get their lives back on track and recover damages for their injuries. While no amount of money can truly make up for what our clients have gone through, it can go a long way to helping people achieve and maintain a quality of life, pay for future medical care and restore their dignity.

Our law firm is committed to holding negligent drivers and the insurance companies accountable while protecting injured victims' rights. Call us today at 866-LAW-DAVIS for a free consultation with Will Davis and get answers to your questions.